Singletary said: "I will not tolerate players that think it's about them when it's about the team. We cannot make decisions that cost the team, make your own college football jersey, nfl cheap jerseys, and then come off the sideline and it's nonchalant." The Singletary incident came to mind this week when the Mets fired Tony Bernazard, Customized football jerseys, their director of player personnel. A primary reason for his firing was an incident in which he reportedly tore off his shirt, used profane language and challenged members of the Mets' Class AA team in Binghamton to a fight. The public sentiment has been that Bernazard overreacted in trying to get a message across to the players. The Binghamton club had been underachieving and it was reported that some players had been involved in underage drinking. Many have supported the Mets' decision to fire Bernazard. He said: "I used my pants to illustrate that we were getting our tails whipped on Sunday and how humiliating that should feel for all of us. I needed to do something to dramatize my point; there were other ways I could have done it but I think this got the message across." The prevailing criticism

What do you think, Fifth Down readers? Did Singletary's "tough love" help put the 49ers on the right track last season? Did the Mets buckle to public pressure without taking the "tough love" approach into account? Singletary's tirade after the loss followed his on-field confrontation with tight end Vernon Davis.
